

Accessing Technical Assistance for Your Prenatal-to-Three Community Grant Application

At the heart of the Sweetened Beverage Tax Prenatal-to-Three Community Grant is a mission to advance racial equity through the increase of investments in community-driven programs focused on prenatal-to-three services.

In acknowledgement that structural racism has and continues to adversely affect access to funding, the City of Seattle's Department of Education and Early Learning has contracted with experienced and equity-driven consultants to provide technical assistance at no charge to the community. Technical assistance providers can support applicants by helping them:

- Determine their eligibility and/or suitability of their application for this funding opportunity
- Understand how to respond to the prompts in the short answer portion
- Conceptualize proposed services based on applicants' previous experience, connections to their respective communities, areas of expertise
- Be thoughtful in their planning and the completion of the required budget template

Technical assistance (TA) providers may not write any part of the proposal for applicants. Additionally, they are not able to speak to an applicant/applications' competitiveness or the likelihood of it being funded. Applicants can access technical assistance by contacting any of the TA providers below at their listed email address.

Catherine Verrenti is thrilled to have an opportunity to support applicants that are deeply embedded in the community. She offers skills and insights gained from her twenty years of hands-on experience. This expertise includes grant development plus managing a wide range of culturally responsive family support, case management and homeless programs. She approaches this work by first listening to what CBOs hope to accomplish in their community. This might be articulating a strong needs statement, helping to develop partnerships, or forming a compelling grant narrative. She can be uniquely helpful in fine-tuning program designs, projecting achievable performance targets and developing budgets. She is particularly excited to help CBOs think through all parts of their program to ensure strong program launch and implementation.
